2016 NCORE NETWORK INFORMATION SHEET

If you want to learn about racial justice issues, here is an amazing opportunity!

For each of the last seventeen years, Hamline has sent a team of students, staff, and faculty to the National Conference on Race and Ethnicity in Higher Education. NCORE is a five-day gathering of people whose work and passion addresses race and racism on college campuses, in such areas as classrooms, organizations and co-curricular activities, administrative practice and campus policy, campus life, and social justice education and training. Hamline team members have returned to campus with new energy, great ideas for programs, connections with nationally known speakers, and a commitment to sharing their learning with the campus community. Among recent Hamline events inspired by NCORE are the lunchtime conversations "This is My Story," the Race Video Discussion Series, the Allies Against White Privilege student group, HU-CORE retreat for students, the annual NCORE Winter Mini-Conference (held in January each year) and countless other classroom and curriculum initiatives.

Would you like to be part of the 2016-2017 Hamline NCORE Team?
